Play is one of the most creative opportunities open to a child and is becoming of increasing interest to therapists and others in the caring professions. This book examines how children develop skills in play as a way of being creative and how they can use play as a therapeutic process by mirroring their own life experiences in their games. Ann Cattanach outlines the theoretical basis and provides guidelines for work in this area. She examines the role an excellent stimulating read with a manageable style and numerous sensitive insights into the world of play for the child and how it can become a therapeutic process where children play out their perception of their own experiences.
